Disclaimer:

It is important to remember that the pre-purchase examination can only give information about the horse's health and condition on the day of the exam. While this information is very important it is unfortunately never a complete picture. Many factors that impact a horse's health are not necessarily detectable on the day of the exam. The veterinarian cannot predict the horse's future, and no guarantee can be issued.

The role of the veterinarian in the pre-purchase examination is not to "pass" or "fail" the horse. Instead, it is to help you, the buyer, to make a more informed decision by providing information about the horse's health. Ultimately the decision to purchase this animal can only be made by the prospective buyer.
